

FORMER NEW LENOX RESIDENT KILLED

Mokena Man Sentenced to Year At Vandalia

Roy M. Shenk, Mokena roofer who was recently arrested by Joliet police on complaint of molesting a six year girl and who has been confined in the county jail, was given a term of one year and a day on the state penal farm at Vandalia by Judge Glenn Cowing Tuesday of this week. Shenk was found guilty on the charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The truck which figured in Shenk's arrest, was brought back to Mokena the past week.

Shenk figured in a shooting affair in Mokena sometime ago when he shot the locks off the James Marti home in Mokena. That time he was committed to the Manteno hospital but after being there a week he was released and returned to Mokena and engaged in the roofing business which he followed up to the time of his recent arrest.

PLAN TO INSTALL MODERN HOME ECONOMICS UNIT AT ORLAND PARK

The following is a letter which has been sent out to the heads of the various civic, social and welfare organizations in Orland Park from the office of T. Erwin Kelly, Supt. of Schools:

"As you probably know, the Board of Education has approved tentative plans to install a modern Home Economics unit in Orland Park, in the restaurant building across the street from the school. This unit will be distinct asset to the community. It is hoped that its use and affect upon the community will not be limited to actual school use. Facilities will be available for adult classes in Home Economics, which many in the community have expressed a desire for. This project will require considerable capital outlay for equipment, which the school would not be able to make available for some time.

We are of the opinion that a community committee composed of representatives from all the organizations of this area could and would be willing to serve in promoting events of a social nature for the purpose of raising funds for this project.

We are very anxious to have all organizations represented on this committee.

The first committee meeting was held in the school library, Thursday, evening, June 10 at 8:00 o'clock. T. Erwin Kelly

New Lenox Dog Owners Irate When Pets Are Shot

When Deputy Dewey Moore of New Lenox started shooting dogs Monday in connection with the county wide drive against stray dogs he started up a veritable hornets nest.

The reason being that he shot a couple of pet dogs. One dog was 12 years old belonging to Geo. Marshall. It was shot on the highway in front of their place. This dog was a neighborhood pet and was the canine hero of a few years ago when he saved the small son of Geo. Koeller from drowning in Hickory creek. Another dog belonging to Lofton Qualls had broken his chain and strayed into New Lenox. He was shot near the Bormet filling station.

Dog owners are greatly outraged over this shooting claiming that these dogs were not vicious, but were family pets and that really stray dogs that should be put away are still roaming around the countryside.

FRANKFORT HOME BUREAU TO HAVE GUEST DAY JUNE 15

POULTRY RAISERS ARE EFFECTED BY ACUTE FEED SHORTAGE

Chicken raisers are facing a very serious feed question since feed dealers in this section have had their feed allotments greatly curtailed and cannot supply the demand for poultry feed. Oyster shells are completely off the market and feed dealers are only getting mixed cars of feed. Farmers are finding it difficult to get feed for their stock. Those who can raise enough of their own feed are lucky. Many of the smaller feed dealers are being forced out of business.

WAR RATION BOOK 3

Applications for War Ration Book No. 3 are now being distributed by mail carriers. Distribution was started on May 20 and is scheduled for completion on June 5. Families that have not received application forms for War Ration Book No. 3 on or before June 5 will call for the form at their local Post Office and should have filled out and mailed the card before June 10.

War Ration Book No. 3 will be mailed from the OPA Mailing Center, Chicago, and not from the local school sites or local boards.

Applications for War Ration Book No. 3 should not include any members of the armed forces, whether they reside at home, at military posts or elsewhere. Provision for members of the armed forces will be made at a later date, prior to the effective date for using War Ration Book No. 3.

Sugar For Home Canning For Individuals

Instead of going to local rationing "sugar allowance coupons" for use in buying canning sugar, as was previously announced, consumers will now use stamps in War Ration Book 1 which are designated for obtaining part of their canning sugar allotment. Sugar will be allowed at the rate of one pound for each four quarts, or eight pounds of finished fruit, and five pounds per person, in making jams and jellies, with total not to exceed 25 pounds per person.

According to the revised program Stamps No. 15 and 16 in War Ration Book 1 will each be good for five pounds of sugar for home canning. Consumers will obtain this sugar by taking their War Ration Books to retailers rather than applying to local boards for sugar coupons, as was announced earlier.

Stamps 15 and 16 became valid May 24, and may be used for obtaining canning sugar in amounts of five pounds each through Oct. 31, 1943. Persons who require less than ten pounds of sugar, but an amount other than five pounds will apply to their local boards for the exact amount they need in place of using Stamps No. 15 and 16.

In exceptional cases where consumers will require more than ten pounds of canning sugar obtainable with sugar stamps in War Ration Book 1, application for additional allotments may be made at the Local Boards. Such applications must be made in writing, one application per family unit, and may be mailed or presented in person. Each application must be accompanied by War Ration Book 1 for each person for whom application is made and should, in addition, provide the boards with the following information:

1. The number of quarts or lbs. of processed foods the applicant, and the members of the family unit of which he is a member, for whom application is made, have produced since March 1, 1943, or intend to produce from fresh fruits, for use;
2. The amount of sugar obtained thru the use of Stamps No. 15 and 16, or thru this application, which has been used or will be used in making jams, jellies, preserves and fruit butter;
3. That he has used, or will use, such sugar for home canning and at the prescribed rate, an average of one pound for four quarts of finished fruit and that he will not use in excess of five pounds per person for making jams and jellies.

264 Pints of Blood Donated To Tinley Blood Bank

A grand total of 264 pints of blood was donated at the mobile blood bank held at the Tinley Park public school gym Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The staff of the blood bank arrived a little late Tuesday which cut down their working time, but they did take 122 pints of blood. Wednesday was the banner day when 142 pints were taken. A grand total of 401 persons offered blood donations. A number of the donors were rejected due to colds and showing signs of running temperatures.

The staff operating the blood bank consisted of 30 persons including nurses.

No one is reported to have had ill effects from the loss of blood, outside of feeling a little dizzy, which however soon wore off. For many of the donors the blood bank was a thrilling experience.

Brown Campbell and his many fine co-workers in the surrounding communities are to be highly commended for the very fine public service they have rendered. Excellent co-operation was reported from the chairmen in the surrounding towns.

Blood donors came from Markham McArthur, Midlothian, Oak Forest, Orland Park, Tinley Park, Lincoln Estates, Frankfort and Mokena was also represented by Mrs. Lloyd Warning.

MOKENA INSTRUCTOR TO GRADUATE 22 STUDENTS

Mr. Arthur Shoop of Mokena who is an instructor of Industrial Management for Foremen, a part of the Engineering, Science, Management and War training at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago will graduate a class of 22 students at the school tonight.

SPORT, being a large part of a large section of the human race, may need a number of changes and improvements. So does the human race. But one thing sport doesn't need is a sport co-ordinator or any set of sport co-ordinators working in or from Washington.

Sport can take its share of punishment—but there is still a limit.

Sport, left under its present guidance and direction will be far better off than it could ever hope to be under government direction.

Considering the amateur and professional side, sport still has such experienced administrators as Judge Landis, Ford Frick and William Harridge for baseball—Herbert Bayard Swope for racing—Major Griffiths of the Western conference and Asa Bushnell of the Eastern conference in college athletics—George Blossom and his USGA committee in golf—Elmer Layden for pro football—good men in tennis, bowling and basketball—including the AAU.

There is no perfect human being in this long list. But it should be remembered that there is no part of a perfect human being in the world we know today.

The Main Idea

Sport would be far better off, for the game itself and everyone concerned which includes many, many millions, if Washington would let it work out its own destiny with the war effort, naturally, the predominant point.

If those now in charge of various sports, with their long experience, can't handle the problems that wait ahead, then sport hasn't a chance. Many of these have made mistakes. But those criticizing them might have made even bigger mistakes.

This is no world in which to seek perfection and it is my belief that most of those directing sport have turned in a pretty fair job. Not a masterpiece, just a pretty good job.

It seems to us that the government in Washington already has its full share of problems in trying to handle the workings of the army, the navy, the marines, the air force, the coast guard, the gasoline and rubber situation, the food tangle prices, the tax bill, inflation, the unions, the coal miners and ten or twenty other matters, without attempting to pile on another headache. There have been various rumors around that many of these problems have not yet been settled to the complete satisfaction of the nation at large.

There have even been rumors that many of these important matters have been somewhat muddled.

It is difficult to understand where any good could come from the addition of a new snarl.

The Other Side

There are many who believe that there is a strong organized influence against competitive sport, and professional sport in general, on the side of mass, muscle-making development, devoted largely to such matters as calisthenics and non-competitive training.

It can't believe the country has moved into any such state of complete insanity.

Competitive sport has been one of the major factors in the development of this country, and it is more needed today than it ever was before.

We need this—not against the war effort—but as a vital part of the war effort.

It is my belief that most of the leaders in Washington know this to be true.

It might be that some ambassador of sport might help a trifle in making his plea at court.

I doubt it. For I believe most of those in charge at Washington understand the benefits that can come from a sporting program handled entirely as a war-effort benefit.

Philadelphia Story

The true "Philadelphia Story" is wrapped around the astonishing Phillies of 1943.

When Bill Cox took over this tabular inhabitant of the cellar a short while back and brought in Bucky Harris to handle the remains, the general opinion was that it would take about two years in which to remove the winding sheet.

But when the Phillies lately played to over 50,000 spectators in two games, there was something new to think about in a baseball way.

The season, which started darkly, is still young. And yet in this morbid beginning the Phillies have already drawn out greater crowds than 1940, 1941 or 1942 knew in mid-season.

They have a hustling young club under a smart, hustling leader—the type of ball club that probably won't finish in the first division, but will no longer be the doormat for the rest of the league.

The main answer is that the Phillies are almost certain to break their attendance record for many years, wherever they finish.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE much-debated question—just how good a fighter is Beau Jack?—was answered quite specifically when the lightweight champion lost to Bob Montgomery, rangy Philadelphia Negro, before a capacity crowd in Madison Square Garden.

The fight definitely will not rank as one of ringdom's great spectacles. Certain vulgar people were heard to make snide remarks concerning the caliber of present lightweight boxers. But both boys gave all they had. Both were game, courageous and willing to take a chance. But fighters like Barney Ross, Tony Canzoneri, Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers could have whipped either man with a minimum of difficulty.

Beau Jack was 3-1 in the ringside betting, after closing in the afternoon marts at 2-1. From that angle it was the biggest boxing upset of the year. The decision of Referee Arthur Donovan and the two judges was unanimous, none of them giving Montgomery less than nine rounds. One press association scored 11 for Montgomery, three for Jack and one even.

The Records

From the record the fight was slated to be a good one. The Beau hadn't lost a fight in two years, his defeat-free span of 16 bouts stemming back into late 1941. Montgomery's record of 50 victories in 59 fights, 27 by knockouts, including five non-title meetings with lightweight champions, (three times with Sammy Angott and twice with Lew Jenkins) was extremely flattering. But the boys couldn't hurl statistics at each other.

From the spectators' viewpoint, the fight at least was an active affair. Both men kept flailing away. Beau Jack started his usual routine of left-hand jabs, often landing six or seven without being stopped. But he carried a fly swatter instead of a post maul. And the Beau tired quickly. Neither man ever had fought a 15-round battle before, but it was Montgomery who proved to have the greatest reserve. And that wasn't the most surprising thing in the world.

Even in his 12-round engagements Jack had shown a tendency to weaken before the close. It is obvious that no athlete can retain his original drive through a dozen rounds of hard going. But Jack has the habit of running down suddenly. He doesn't lack courage, but his stamina gives out.

Competitive sport has been one of the major factors in the development of this country, and it is more needed today than it ever was before.

We need this—not against the war effort—but as a vital part of the war effort.

MORE CANNED GOODS

Housewives who will get more canned goods this summer can thank the senate's Truman committee. No one announced it officially, but it was due to their probing that the army recently released 30 million cases of canned fruits and vegetables for civilian use.

The Truman committee had revealed the fact that huge quantities of canned goods were being hoarded or unwisely used by the army, when fresh vegetables were easily available. Especially revealing was the cross-examination of Gen. E. B. Gregory, the army's quartermaster general, by Senator Brewster of Maine.

"Why does the army feed canned grapefruit to its troops in Miami," asked Brewster, "when grapefruit is growing fresh all over Florida?"

"Because the men are too lazy to prepare fresh grapefruit," was General Gregory's frank reply.

He also admitted that green vegetables and fruits were readily available to army camps during a large part of the year, but that army commissaries purchased canned goods because it was easier to prepare than fresh vegetables.

The Truman committee also found that as a result of this hoarding the packers and canners were in a quandary and expected to curtail production. They knew the army had overpurchased, could never use its vast stores of canned goods. So the canners figured the army would dump this back on the market, thereby causing an oversupply just at the wrong time. That was why 30 million cases were turned back to civilian use by the army now, to ease the market while there is a civilian shortage.

WHITE COLLAR MINERS

While the War Labor board had John L. Lewis over a barrel for asking a $2-a-day wage increase for organized coal miners, another branch of the government, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, okayed various salary increases for non-union supervisory employees in coal mines.

The matter was kept hushed up by secret-loving Internal Revenue bureaucrats, but here are the facts:

A special Internal Revenue branch, known as the Salary Stabilization unit, functions in the salary field like the War Labor board in the wage field, to keep personal earnings below inflationary levels. The new unit must approve applications for all salary boosts affecting business executives and white collar workers.

While everything the War Labor board does is open to public scrutiny, Internal Revenue's Salary Stabilization unit operates strictly behind the scenes and doesn't answer to anybody.

Recently, it leaked out, however, that bituminous coal mine operators, in a move to block union organization of mine "sub-bosses," had requested government permission to increase salaries of all supervisory employees, including mine superintendents, managers, foremen, sub-bosses, etc. That white-collar increase amounted to an average of $2 a day—just the increase the miners asked for.

GRAIN FROM CANADA

Food Boss Chester Davis has spent days looking for a good transportation man to solve that problem of bringing in wheat from Canada.

Commodity Credit corporation has bought 7½ million bushels of Canadian wheat, but not a bushel has moved. Meantime, dairy and poultry farmers in the Northeast are running low on feed grains.

Great Lakes steamers got moving a month late, on account of the late thaw. They are loaded down with ore for the steel mills, have no space for grain. Rail movement is the only alternative.

Grain stocks in the U. S. have been the heaviest in history, but so is consumption of grain. Record-breaking animal production is eating into the stocks so fast that foreign imports must be moved. This is one time when farmers would welcome some of that much abused Argentine corn and wheat.

Behind this excitement about grain supplies is one big question mark which few people outside the government realize, namely, the feeding of occupied territories.

If and when invasion comes, the civilians on the invasion front, whether in France, the Low Countries, or the Balkans, will have to be fed from the American bread basket. Quickest way to get food to starving people is in the form of grain.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

FDR has no love for the duke and duchess of Windsor, saw nothing of them when they conferred with Churchill. . . . The only time Churchill ever was booted on the floor of commons was when he made his famous speech in the winter of 1936 defending Edward's right to marry Wally and remain king of England. . . . Only a handful of labor is coming up from the Bahamas to work in the U. S. A., so this was just an excuse to see Churchill. He wants to get back to London.

Plan 'Schools of Soil'

For Young Workers

Specific Farm Skills

Now Being Developed

Training of non-farm high school students for wartime farm work has two objectives, according to the plan announced by the U. S. department of agriculture.

One is to familiarize these young people with rural and farm life, and the other to provide training in specific farm skills.

Classes in farm work are being given in schools throughout the country this spring, so that the farmers' valuable time will not have to be used to teach young workers their job when they are supposed to be helping him. He will be responsible only for on-the-farm training where individual requirements demand it, or special processes are involved.

Among the jobs being taught are cleaning dairy barns, brushing cows, whitewashing building interiors, milking, pitching hay, harnessing and driving horses, operating tractors, and machinery repair. Some of these may sound simple, but the department of agriculture points out that each has its little technique that makes the difference between an efficient piece of work and one that is slipshod.

Other jobs for the young will include hoeing, weeding, picking fruit and berries, harvesting sugar beets, feeding chickens, gathering eggs, and—for some of the girls—assisting "Mrs. Farmer" with the cooking, dishwashing, scrubbing, sweeping and dusting that are the "KP" of the farm army.

The training program is primarily to be the responsibility of the U. S. Office of Education and the state departments of education—in other words, the responsibility of the public schools from coast to coast. Where possible, the farming activities will be conducted on farms or in real situations.

In each community it is planned to bring before the prospective young workers speakers such as farmers, vocational agriculture teachers, farm labor specialists of the U. S. employment service, representatives of agricultural colleges and of farm organizations, county agents, and others who can speak authoritatively on the many phases of farm work. Local facilities such as public markets, milk plants and fruit storage plants also will be utilized.

On-the-job group training will be carried on where it is found desirable. It will be given by a teacher of vocational agriculture or some other approved individual.

Melons

Each year, the American public drinks about 80,000,000 gallons of canned fruit juices, excluding cider. This habit has salvaged thousands of tons of fruit which otherwise would be wasted.

If watermelon juice can be marketed as a beverage, as some enthusiasts believe, this might open a new market for food which now has no use. Tons of watermelons are grown for seed, leaving quantities of waste which is now a total loss. The rind of surplus watermelons may be used for sweet pickles, but pickling varieties with thick rinds are grown especially for this purpose. Some surplus is used for stock feed and some unharvested watermelons are plowed under as fertilizer.

Studies are being made to find out the possibilities of extracting oil from watermelon seeds. About 61,000,000 watermelons are marketed each year and another 2,000,000 are left unharvested because of adverse market conditions.

Cantaloupes and other muskmelons are raised entirely for the fresh fruit market. The only market for the surplus crop and the culls is as stock feed and fertilizer and about one-half of the entire crop is wasted.

In Colorado, alone, an average of 1,000,000 pounds of cantaloupe are harvested each year for seed and seed raisers have no way of getting rid of the melon waste. Experiments are under way to find methods for drying muskmelons for cattle feed.

Using Poisons on Crops

Pests which attack practically all vegetable crops can be destroyed by toxic substances without undue danger to humans if properly applied and the vegetables and fruits are thoroughly washed and handled after harvest.

On potatoes and other root crops where the tops are not used for food they should be washed thoroughly and not be sprayed or dusted within 15 or 30 days before picking. Poison remains on plants longer when dry.

Indians 'Bargained' Out

Homes; Laugh Best

The Osage Indian tribe has the last laugh on the white man. During the 19th century, the Osage were forced and "bargained" out of Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas, retaining only the rocky hills of northern Oklahoma out of their once great domain.

Then came oil, black gold gushing from the Osage hills. Once worth 70 cents an acre, this land has since produced 273 million dollars in gas and oil—more than $120,000 in cash revenue for each Osage Indian.

Promise:

You will be missed . . . but not when hope is small
And I revolt against the tricks of fate,
You will be missed . . . but not when I recall
The awesome shutting of a quiet gate,
Not when the winds come racing down the sky
And there is chill and famine in the air
Not when the heart is desolate and dry . . .
Not when the eyes are mirrors of despair . . .

You will be missed when life is at its best
When every rose has opened to the sun,
You will be missed when I no longer quest . . .
With all goals made and every victory won;
For this is love . . . to share the least delight
And bear alone the terror and the night!

Britishers in Tunisia are splitting their sides over this one. One of the Lommies there lost his bayonet, and rather than face the consequences of admitting the misdemeanor, carved out an excellent imitation of the missing weapon. For weeks he went about his duties with the fake concealed in his scabbard, safe from censure so long as his handwork went undetected. When the inevitable order came to "Fix Bayonets," however, he was undone. He simply stood there, his scabbard untouched.

The sergeant demanded an explanation. "It's a promise I made my father," said the Tommy. "As he lay on his death-bed I told him I would never bare a bayonet on the anniversary of his death."

"That's the damndest fish story I ever heard!" the sergeant thundered. "Lemme see that bayonet!"

"For breaking a solemn promise," said the Tommy as he slowly drew forth the bayonet, "—may the Lord turn it to wood!"

An MGM writer decided he wanted to get into the Army. "I'm serious," he told pals. "I want to be one of the best soldiers."

And this is what happened at the induction center. He remarked that the place was crowded and that it was so stuffy. The psychiatrist heard him and marked down "Claustrophobia."

"Oh, please," said the scrivener, "don't do that, I'm just over-anxious."

The man wrote: "Nervous."

"Oh, look now," said the lad. "I'm not nervous. I was drinking last night."

The man wrote: "Alcoholic."

"But I don't drink much," he interrupted, "I'm all keyed up. To be awake I took benzedrine."

The man wrote: "Drug addict."

The poor guy is back at MGM.

When Larry Lesueur, the CBS correspondent, visited a soldiers' hospital in Moscow, he chatted with a wounded man who the doctors said wouldn't be able to fight again. Lesueur asked the soldier what he planned to do and was told that he intended to go back to the front. "You can't," said Lesueur, "there are plenty of men to take your place."

"You don't understand," was the Russian's reply. "No one can take another's place in a fight."

A reader requests the origin of the word "racket." It was underworldese for "party." In the old days in New York on the lower East Side when mobsters ran a dance or affair for a pal in a jam—they sold tickets to it.

"We're gonna have a racket Friday night," they'd say. Often small-time gangsters would employ that theme to get ready money, with no thought of holding the event. Such cheats were called "racketeers."

And when a stranger was being checked, they'd ask: "What's his racket?"

Some of us were gabbing about pungent drama criticism. A Broadway vet recalled Woolcott's slap at a second-rate musical. "The plot," he wrote, "hasn't a leg to stand on and there are chorus girls to match."

Evt. M. Wilk of "This Is the Army" tells of the bloke who brought his troubles to The Good Will Hour. "Mr. Anthony," he began, "my best friend ran away with my wife. They've been gone a month—and, Mr. Anthony—I miss him!"

Sights You Don't See From a Bus: The elderly lady, who peddles posies on Broadway, wearing the four blue star button as proudly as MacArthur wears his four stars. . . . The steady customer at the Hickory House who brings his own potatoes. . . . The midtowners studying a sign painter near the Follies stage entrance, with all those shapely ankles chafing nearby! . . . If you were to say the first bugle call of the day in the Army is "Reveille"—you'd be wrong. It's "First Call." But you probably know what cigarette gets first call with Army men—it's Camel. MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. When Captain McLaughlin learns that Ken has not been promoted the colt seems farther away than ever. But Nell convinces Ken's father that the colt may be just what Ken needs to teach him to take responsibility.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IV

When Ken and Howard reached the corral, preparations were almost completed. Doc Hicks, six feet two and built like a Hereford steer, never wasted time. A day's work often meant three or four such jobs as this, with perhaps a hundred miles of Wyoming roads to cover in his high-powered dusty black car, piled full of boxes and satchels, instruments, serums, bottles, lariats, halters. The big vet and McLaughlin were talking together, at the same time that they kept an eye on what was going on, Tim mending the fence of the little round corral where the gelding was to be done, Doc's assistant bringing the lariat from the car, Gus tending the fire which had been built just outside the fence.

The boys went close to their father and stood listening, and McLaughlin's hand dropped to Ken's shoulder in a natural, casual manner. It was an important, exciting, day.

"No, it's more of that black grease I want," said McLaughlin. "I've got the can in the stable; come on, I'll show you."

They walked off. Howard went over to Gus and looked at Doc's black leather bag where it stood on the grass beside the feed box which Gus had upturned and covered with a piece of Nell's clean white sheet. In that bag were the instruments.

Ken climbed the corral fence and sat watching the two-year-olds.

Ken felt the singing spirit of them, the young hearts, the free, overflowing power, and his hands tightened on the rail of the fence. A choking filled his throat.

"I've got one too," he muttered. "Oh, you beauties—in a year, my yearling will be like you—"

Longing to be closer to them, he slipped down from the fence and ran to his father.

"Dad, can I bring them in?"

"Don't have to bring them in," said his father. "All I have to do is show 'em a bucket, and they'll come in of themselves. Go get me a bucket of oats."

Coming back with the bucket, Ken paused to watch Doc Hicks opening his bag, laying out some instruments on the clean white sheet. Howard was kneeling beside him, absorbed, looking at every instrument. Howard liked things like that; instruments, doctor-stuff—Doc took a jar out of his bag, filled it full of alcohol and put a pair of surgical scissors in it and a small sharp knife.

"What's that?" asked Howard.

"Scapel," answered Doc. He looked at the boys, grinning in his rough way. "How'd you like to be doing it?"

"I'd like it," said Howard promptly. "I'd like to be a vet."

"How 'bout you?"

Ken didn't answer. The color was fading from his face. He tried to look scornful.

Rob opened the gate and stood calling the stallions. He shook the bucket and whistled his trilling whistle. It carried to the colts and several of them raised their heads from their grazing and looked at him. They all looked, standing still, facing him. One started to walk slowly toward him, then the others. In a moment they were all cantering, bearing down on him.

McLaughlin fed them first, let each one dip his mouth into the bucket and have a taste of the oats; then let one through and closed the gate. The other colts stood there, crowding and pushing, now and then kicking at each other.

Bill was ready with the lariat.

Bill's eyes were as keen and steady as a marksman taking aim, as he stood in the middle, whirling the loop of his lariat. Suddenly it snaked out along the ground; both forefeet of the colt fell in it. He went down with a crash, and Tim was kneeling on his head before he could move. McLaughlin and Gus tied his feet. Doc went in with his knife, and the colt screamed and tried to struggle. It was over in a minute.

They loosed him and he got to his feet. They opened the gate into the big corral, and the colt trotted in there and stood by the fence, head hanging down, blood streaming.

One after the other came in prancing, was thrown and castrated, then moved into the other corral. The men worked more and more quietly. Doc's joshing ceased, McLaughlin's face looked angry and strained.

Ken had to hold on to the fence. It wasn't only the blood and the cutting, it was the way the colts stood when it was over. They crowded into a bunch in the corner of the big corral and stood motionless and shocked, one or two off alone by themselves.

Between operations, McLaughlin went to them with a bucket of oats and offered it with gentle words, "Well, old boy, pretty tough, isn't it—"

A few of the colts lifted their heads at the familiar voice, dipped their muzzles into the bucket; but most of them stood quiet and would not move. McLaughlin patted them, stroked their necks, comforted them.

Ken felt himself going. He slid down the fence, and stood with his face against it, hanging on.

"Look at the kid," said Bill, and McLaughlin turned, and in two strides was beside Ken.

"Here, here—" he had him by the shoulder.

Ken fought him off, furious, sobbing—

"Why, son—"

Ken broke away from his father, ducked through the bars of the fence, and vanished around the stable. He ran a long way, up the hill and into the pines, and threw himself face down on the ground.

He was thinking of his own colt—a year from now—when they would be gelding it—he saw it suddenly as clearly as if it was there before him, a bright golden sorrel, like Banner—he saw the blood running down its legs—

After a long time he heard a car starting. The engine picked up, it was climbing the hill behind the house, the sound faded away. Doc Hicks was gone.

Ken pounded with the toe of his boot on the earth.

He heard a match struck close by, and raised his head to see his father standing there, lighting his pipe.

"I've got one, too," Ken muttered.

McLaughlin sat down beside his boy and puffed at his pipe. He put out an arm and drew Ken against him.

"Kennie—"

"Oh, my colt, Dad—my colt—"

His father's arm held him tighter and Ken pressed against it, crying bitterly.

At dinner, McLaughlin said the first thing he was going to do was to get Rocket into the corral, and into the chute, cut the piece of rope off her neck, then drive her out of the Stable Pasture and out onto the range with the other brood mares.

"Until I get that done," said he, "I can't turn the gelded colts into the Stable Pasture—she'd get mixed up with them and I'd have a heck of a time cutting her out again."

"How long will you keep the colts in the Stable Pasture?" asked Nell.

"About a week. I've got to keep my eye on them. They'll have to be exercised daily. After that, they can go out onto the range with the others. You boys can give them a hard run every day. Ride 'em like hell. This is your chance to whoop it up and yell and act like cowboys."

"Why?" asked Howard.

"If there should be an infected one amongst them—which is always possible—he'd just stand around till he dies. Make him run. That causes drainage of the wound, stirs up circulation. If they're left alone, they'll stand around and mope and won't eat enough to keep up their strength."

Ken hadn't wanted his dinner. Nell was looking at him. She said, "You can leave the table if you want, Ken. Put up my hammock for me. I may want it later."

Ken got the hammock, hung it near the Pergola and lay down in it on his back, with feet and hand dangling over the sides, giving little shoves against the ground.

They do it to all the horses in the world, Ken thought, only a few left for studs. And to all the steers—

Nell came out with her apron tied around her and her coffee cup in her hand and stood looking at the sky.

"Golly, it's hot!" she said. "It's time we had the canvas up."

She looked over at Ken, as she stood stirring her coffee, and then sat down in one of the hickory chairs beside him.

"It doesn't really do them any harm, Ken," she said.

Ken wasn't surprised. She could always read his thoughts.

"Doesn't it, Mother?"

"No. It has to be done. Don't feel badly about it, dear. It isn't nice to watch. I was sorry you had to. In a week, they won't know that anything ever happened to them."

"Won't they?"

"Just look at Highboy. And all the great race horses."

"All gelded, Mother?"

"Most of them. A few are stallions, but more are geldings. Ken, you know the world is full of unpleasant things. Pain and operations and sickness and discomfort. You mustn't mind. That's just the way life is. Besides all that, there is health and goodness and soundness and fun and happiness, too, for horses as well as boys—much more of the good things than the bad—"

He turned his face to her, beginning to smile; and she put out her hand and pushed the damp hair back from his forehead. "Take the bad with the good. That's the way grown-up people do. You've just had a little bit of growing up today."

"I really do feel an awful lot different, Mother," he said. "When I got up this morning and didn't even know I was going to have a colt seems awful far away."

"People grow up that way," said Nell. "In spurts. All of a sudden, they are years older."

Ken's face became thoughtful. "Besides, I can have a filly instead of a horse colt. Dad rides a mare."

McLaughlin's voice, laughing loudly, came out the kitchen window, and the horses on the Green raised their heads, looked at the house and walked expectantly toward it.

McLaughlin appeared in the doorway. "Look at the buggers. Beggin for oats—"

He disappeared again. There was always a bucket of oats hanging on a hook in the enclosed porch outside the kitchen door. He came out with the bucket and went down on the Green to the horses. They crowded around him.

On such occasions he insisted on their good behavior. This meant observance of rules of fair play and turn about. A horse that stuck his nose into the bucket and would not take it out would get a good smack on the side of the head. If they whirled and lashed each other in their jealousy and greediness, he put the bucket behind him and delivered a lecture, the tone of his voice expressing such surprise and indignation that they would hang their heads and all but promise never to do it again. Sometimes he would be completely surrounded and hidden.

The light changed suddenly, and McLaughlin looked at the sky. The heavy cloud bank in the southwest had engulfed the sun and a coolness came into the air.

"It's going to rain," he said. "Will you ride this afternoon, Nell?"

"Later," she answered. "I've got to bake my bread now before the fire goes down."

"I'm going for the mail—anything you want?"

"Two cakes of Fleischman's yeast, and Gus wanted tobacco—Rough Cut—the next time anyone went to the store."

She went back into the house and the boys ran to the big red Studebaker, where it stood on the hill behind the house. Howard got in the front seat, and Ken in the back.

Just about to let in the clutch, McLaughlin paused and looked at Howard.

"By the way, Howard, when did you ride Highboy last?"

"Yesterday afternoon."

"I was noticing his legs—you turned him out with dirty legs."

"I groomed him," Howard wriggled.

"Yes, down to his knees."

"He kicks."

"And whose fault is that?"

Howard sat in silence.

"This would be a good time," said McLaughlin, "to take him up to the stables and groom him. He's right there where you can easily catch him."

"Can't I go with you to the store first?" asked Howard.

McLaughlin sat looking around at the weather signs, as if he had not heard.

Just like his father to wait until a little fun was up and then choose that time to make him groom Highboy.

He got out slowly. Ken climbed into the front seat.

"Take out the stone from in front of the wheel," said his father.

Howard obeyed and the car slid down the hill, the gears gripped, the engine started, and it rattled over the cattle guard and was off down the stretch of straight gravel road over the little stone bridge that spanned Lone Tree Creek, on up and around the shoulder of the wooded hill, and out of sight.

GOD'S EXCEEDING GREAT PROMISES

LESSON TEXT—II Peter 1:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—He hath granted unto us His precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature.—II Peter 1:4, R. V.

Growth in grace and in knowledge of Christ are as normal and expected of the child of God as bodily growth of the physical child. Tragic as is the failure of one to develop physically, it is even more distressing and sad in the spiritual realm. Yet it is a common thing in our churches, where only comparatively few believers even come to full stature in Christ, where more have only a partial growth, and some are forever babes in Christ.

God has made perfect provision for us, and has in His Word given plain and explicit instructions on how to gain spiritual development.

I. All Things Provided (vv. 1-4).

In the physical world we are able to provide, at least in some degree, what is needed. We also know where to find mental food. Spiritual provision can come only from God, and we find from these verses that He has provided not just a small portion, or a limited ration, but "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," through the knowledge of Christ.

The "exceeding great and precious promises" of God are the abundant portion of the believer. They are sure promises, based in the altogether dependable Word of God.

God's provision for us in Christ has made it unnecessary to look elsewhere. Here is escape from the world's corruption, the new nature in Christ, faith, grace, peace, power—all in Him.

The opposite is also true, that without Christ men have only the weak and disappointing help of men on which to draw. Of such foolish ones the Lord said through Jeremiah the prophet that they "have committed two evils: They have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water" (Jer. 2:13).

II. All Diligence Required (vv. 5-7).

There is something that the Christian can do to insure his growth in grace. He is to be diligent, that is, have an earnest purpose and zeal to go ahead spiritually. This calls for application and endeavor, just as progress in any other sphere of life, and possibly more.

Faith is the foundation of all such growth and without it there is nothing on which to build. But on it, or better, "in" it, we have all these other Christian graces springing up, as we give "all diligence" to encourage their growth.

Notice the ascending scale. Faith leads to virtue, that is, courageous, resolute Christian character. Then comes knowledge—the intelligent understanding and discernment of truth. This is bound together by temperance, meaning self-control. Next is patience, that steady endurance which keeps going in spite of trial or disappointment.

The sixth note in this octave of graces is godliness, which speaks of piety, true devotion to God, and reverence for His name. Such a believer will love his brethren in all brotherly kindness; and that leads us to the high point of love (the real meaning of "charity," v. 7). Here love for God is obviously in mind, as the crowning grace of the believer.

III. All Eternity Assured (vv. 8-11).

We should look forward to that abundant "entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" spoken of in verse 11. There is such a thing as being saved "so as by fire" (I Cor. 3:15), slipping into heaven with nothing to show for our life as followers of Christ here on earth (read I Cor. 3:12-15).

God does not want for His people such an unseemly entrance upon eternity. Why should we be satisfied so to live that it may be true of us. Saved? Yes, but that is all! Are you satisfied with that prospect?

We should note, too, that this growth in grace will show itself in our daily life. It will keep us from being "barren (idle) and unfruitful" (v. 8). The Christian life must not be barren of true service for Christ, nor unfruitful of gracious harvest for Him. We are not on a sort of spiritual joy ride, sitting at ease as we speed on to the heavenly dwelling places.

Works do not save a man. We are justified before God by faith. But our faith is justified before men by our works of righteousness. Fruit grows on the living and healthy tree.

Observe that the Christian who lacks these graces (Do you?) is a nearsighted one who lacks both vision and grateful remembrance of God's loving-kindness (v. 9). How many members of our churches need their spiritual memory jogged and their spiritual eyes anointed with God's "eyesalve" (Rev. 3:18).

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Improper brake adjustment is a rubber-waster. Have your brakes checked regularly. If one wheel "takes hold" before the others, its rubber carries the full brunt of stopping the car, with resultant excessive rubber wear.

In their search for rubber substitutes, scientists are now probing myrcene, a turpentine derivative discovered about fifty years ago. The list of rubber "sources" is growing almost daily.

It is expected that the 1943 harvest of crude rubber in the United States will total 600 tons, all guayule. Normally this country consumed about 600,000 tons of rubber a year.

New Head of Christian Science Church

In a statement to the annual meeting of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., Monday the Directors first emphasized the word prayer, then followed with the term, miracle of deliverance which is to be accepted, they said, as the logical answer to righteous prayer.

Thus, deliverance from the hand of the oppressor was seen by the Directors to be no miracle at all, but rather a simple witnessing to the fact that power springs from the prayer of understanding.

"A praying people can never suffer defeat," summarized the Directors' remarks to several thousand Christian Scientists assembled in the Mother Church.

MRS. DAISSETTE D. S. MCKENZIE
Incoming President of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts

"Battles are not won," the Directors said, "through trust alone, but through intelligent, scientific preparation and skillful execution. As we reach out to God through understanding prayer, the human footprints to bring our deliverance from this cruel warfare and all evil will be revealed."

Yes, the demands of the hour are crucial, the statement said; they are imperative; they call upon us as Christian Scientists to be instant in prayer, not just prayer of affirmation and expectancy, but prayer that demands, through spiritual understandings, that the might of right prevail.

The Directors also announced the election of Mrs. Daisette D. S. McKenzie of Cambridge, Mass. as Pres. of the Mother Church for the ensuing year, succeeding Mrs. Elizabeth F. Norwood of Brookline, Mass.

In this decisive and final conflict, the speaker stated, determining the immediate future of the world, how exceedingly blessed it is to belong to this valiant army of those who are working, both defensively and offensively, for civilization and Christian ideals. The outward organization of the Christian Science movement, sacred and important as it is, but the outward and visible sign of that Unseen Army comprising all the great and good of the earth, both past and present.

The retiring President pointed out that it is not people who are waging the present world conflict, but forces of evil working through people to destroy the very foundation of true Christianity. This form of human domination, she said, would attempt to force upon mankind a godless system in which there is no Christ-likeness, no love. She concluded with the exhortation to those on the battle front to realize their protection in the presence of God and His Truth, and for those on the home front to keep their minds filled with the spirit of godliness which giveth to all men the right of individual salvation.

A. Warren Norton, Manager of the Christian Science Publishing Society, reported an increase in the circulation of all Christian Science publications, including The Christian Science Monitor.

Emphasis was placed by Mr. Norton upon the public recognitions of merit won by the Monitor during the past year for outstanding editorial and news content, and typographical make up. He referred to the winning of Columbia University's Maria Moors Cabot Award for outstanding contribution in the field of Inter-American Relations, the Monitor being the first newspaper in the United States to earn this recognition. The Monitor also won the F. Wayland Ayer competition among daily newspapers for excellence in typography, make up and presswork. On May 28 this paper also obtained a medal of distinction for service in Journalism of the University of Missouri.

State, provincial, and national legislative bodies, were shown to have dealt fairly with Christian Science activities in the statement of Arthur W. Eckman, Manager of Committees on Publication. The State of Delaware, he noted, adopted a bill legalizing the practice of Christian Science.

There are now fourteen chaplains of our denomination serving in the Armed Forces of the United States, he said; thirteen in the Army and 1 in the Navy. He pointed out that fifteen vacancies in the Army remained to be filled.

From the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy came the report that since the year 1913, when the Trustees were first appointed, they have expended $6,400,000 on church work. Announcement was also made that the sales of Mrs. Eddy's works including "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," had more than doubled in the last two years.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Only Cause and Creator" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 6.

The Golden Text was, "Whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever; nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it" (Ecclesiastes 3: 14.)

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thus saith God the Lord, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein: I am the Lord: that is my name; and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images" (Isaiah 42: 5,8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is but one creator and one creation. This creation consists of the unfolding of spiritual ideas and their identities, which are embraced in the infinite Mind and forever reflected. These ideas range from the infinitesimal to infinity, and the highest ideas are the sons and daughters of God" (p. 502).

Three Japs killed with one bullet was the score of Marine Pfc. Nicholas Sileo while defending a small village somewhere in the South Pacific. Amending the Illinois Constitution

The Illinois Constitution was adopted more than 70 years ago. It provides that an amendment must be submitted at a general election and must receive a majority of all the votes cast at such election before it is adopted. These requirements were not intended to make the constitution unduly difficult to amend, and under the conditions that existed at that time amendments were easily made. During the first 20 years it was in force, five amendments were submitted to the voters and all of them were adopted.

In 1891, however, a law was passed requiring the use of an official ballot at all elections. Prior to that time parties and groups printed their own ballots. All the voter had to do was to deposit the ballot of his choice in the ballot box. After the 1891 law was passed, the official ballot, such as is now in use, was supplied to the voter, who was required to mark it in the polling booth.

The ballots used before 1891 had a vote for any proposed constitutional amendment printed on them if the group preparing the ballots favored the amendment. The ballots used since 1891 have required a voter to personally mark the appropriate square to vote for an amendment. Large numbers of voters, especially those who vote a straight ticket by putting a cross in the party circle, have failed to vote on proposed constitutional amendments. Often a majority of those voting at the election have failed to vote on the proposed amendment and thus in effect voted against it.

As a result, during the period of more than 50 years since the passage of the official ballot law, 12 amendments have been submitted and only 2 have been adopted. The last amendment was adopted in 1908, which is 35 years ago.

During this 50 year period an amendment to liberalize the amendment clause, usually referred to as a gateway amendment, has failed four times. The percentage of the total vote cast against this amendment ranged from a little over six to a little over 15 per cent. There was never any serious objection to the gateway amendment on the part of the electorate. Each time, except the first, an overwhelming majority of those voting on it voted in favor of its adoption. The last time there were approximately four times as many votes for it as against it. The difficulty is that many voters fail to vote on this proposed amendment. The remedy is to make it easier for them to do so.

Two plans to accomplish this purpose in connection with another proposed gateway amendment are before the legislature.

The first plan is embodied in the so-called party circle bills. We understand that they are sponsored by the Illinois Agricultural Association, the Illinois Educational Association, the Illinois School Board Association, and the Illinois City of Chicago has supported these bills ever since they were first introduced in 1935.

any party approving or disapproving a proposed amendment to the constitution to put a statement to this effect at the foot of its party column on the ballot. Anyone voting a straight ticket would vote for the party's position on the proposition. An opportunity to split the ticket would be provided in case a person wished to vote a straight ticket but did not wish to vote for the party's position on the amendment. A proposition endorsed by both parties would almost certainly win.

The proposed gateway amendment provides that future amendments to the state constitution can be adopted by a majority or a stated proportion of those voting on the proposition. After this change has been made the use of the party circle plan would not be needed. The bills, therefore, only authorize the use of this plan to vote on the gateway amendment.

A second plan to secure the adoption of a gateway amendment has been put forward this year by the Cook County Judicial Advisory Council under the leadership of Judge Harry Fisher. This plan proposes to submit the amendment to the electorate in the way the constitution itself was submitted.

In 1870 our constitution was submitted by the Constitutional Convention which drafted it on a ballot which provided that anyone who handed in the ballot without marking it was considered to have voted in favor of the new constitution and the eight subsidiary propositions. Anyone who wished to vote against adopting the constitution cancelled the statement "For the New Constitution" with pen or pencil, thus voting against it. The constitution, and all subsidiary propositions, submitted in this way, were adopted. This plan of voting has been legal through the 73 years since the present constitution was adopted. It can be used in connection with any amendment which is submitted. We favor a gateway amendment which, if adopted, would make the further use of this method illegal.

The City Club of Chicago reaffirms its support of the party circle bills. The party circle method of voting has been part of the Illinois system of voting since the State adopted the Australian Ballot Law in 1891. As long as it is in general use, we see no objection to it as a method of securing a gateway amendment.

However, the method of voting proposed by the Cook County Judicial Advisory Council is probably a more effective way of securing this result. If it is adopted it is almost certain that a gateway amendment will be ratified at the first election at which it is submitted. Therefore, while we are in favor of either method, we prefer the use of the Council's bill because we believe that it is a simpler and more efficient way to accomplish the desired result.

The failure of all efforts to amend the constitution during the last 35 years has resulted in many of its provisions becoming obsolete. New legislation to meet modern conditions has frequently failed or been declared unconstitutional because of some obsolete provision in this 73 year old document.

If Illinois is to continue to meet war conditions and prepare to allow its citizens to compete on an equal basis with citizens of other states in post-war industry, it must modernize many provisions of its constitution. For this reason it is essential that a gateway amendment with appropriate provisions for its submission to the electorate be passed at this session of the legislature.

The City Club of Chicago urges all citizens and organizations to communicate with their representatives and urge them to vote for a gateway amendment and for either the party-circle bills or the bills sponsored by the judiciary advisory council, requiring this amendment to be submitted in the same way that the constitution was submitted.

1. Senate Bills 277, 278 and 279, introduced by Butler and Hubbard, and House Bills 578, 579 and 580, introduced by Edwards and D. Hunter. 2. Senate Bill 513 and House Bill 619. 3. Section 10, Schedule of Illinois Constitution.

from one of our boys:

Dear Friends: I received the candy towels, handkerchiefs etc. I just can't express my thoughts for the lovely gifts you always send. It really comes in handy. Sure makes a boy feel happy to know someone is always thinking of us. I just can't thank you enough.

The weather is quite changeable here. It's rained every day since we have been here. Haven't much more to say but this I'd like for you to have my new address put in the News-Bulletin.

Thanks a lot.

ORLAND PARK

ORLAND SERVICEMEN'S NEWS

Mrs. H. Kruspe, Chairman

Hobbs, New Mexico
May 22, 1943

Dear Mrs. Kruspe and Aux.

I returned to camp and found a very lovely box waiting for me and I wish to thank you very much.

One of the first nights I was back we had to work late and the boys and I really enjoyed he candy, cookies and jam. We even played checkers to see who had to buy the cokes to go with the cookies. I lost.

The weather here has been like that in Orland, rains almost every day and for this country it's really unusual.

It seems sort of strange to get back in the army routine after being home on furlough, it was sure swell to see all the folks again. It's too bad all of the boys couldn't get home at one time, but maybe that time isn't so far off.

Well I guess that's about all for now and in closing I wish to thank you again for the lovely box, it certainly was appreciated.

Bye now,

Don Cleveland
Camp Wolters, Texas

May 29, 1943

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:

Just a few brief lines to let you and the Auxiliary members know much I appreciate the handy Service men's kit. It certainly is a worth while gift. You ladies seem to know just what we soldiers need. I am sorry that I wasn't more prompt in expressing my gratitude.

I receive the Orland Park Herald regularly and am kept well informed on the latest home town news and events. My many friends are really swell about writing to me. I enjoy hearing from everyone and answer my mail as quickly as possible. Here's hoping that I get a furlough soon.

Regards to everybody,
Sherman Knox, Jr.
Desert Training Center, Cal.
May 30, 1943

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:

Thanks very much for the service kit. The large can of foot powder that it contained was especially welcome. The weather here is hot during the day, and cold at night. Yesterday at noon the temp. was 135 deg. and by midnight it had gone down to 40 deg. At night it is so cold that the snakes will crawl into the blankets with anyone sleeping on the ground. At first this was somewhat annoying but we soon learned that if you lie still they won't bite. Anyways we are usually too tired to stay awake at night picking snakes out of bed.

Last week we went out on a sixty mile hike and at about 2:00 p.m. all of our water was gone. We were staggering along about half dead, so the CO decided that we would rest until sundown, but when we stopped, a flock of buzzards that had been circling overhead swooped down and eyed us with a hungry look so we kept on going.

Sincerely,
Tom Davidson

The following item appeared in "The Aafsatonian", the camp paper published by outfit of Merrill Cooper at Orlando, Florida and it shows that not only Merrill appreciates the things sent him by friends but that other members of the army do too:

"Dad blame you, SGT. COOPER! Whydida break your ankle and get laid up in the hospital when another box of goodies is due any day from your folks back home? We'll all miss you a lot more. Your friends around Headquarters send their sincere sympathies and best wishes for your speedy recovery, Coop."

He is getting along as well as can be expected and says "It sure is great to have friends." Has many visitors, one has pair of crutches for him, some one at the office has started a book for Coop Club and sent in some of their favorite books for him to read. He receives many letters, so is kept busy answering them. He has his cast from toe to knee covered with names and addresses, poems, pictures, etc. What they don't think of!

He knows now why the northerners get out of this place in the summer. (Hot as—)

Don't forget the American Legion dance to be held Saturday, June 19 at Goodings Grove Hall. Verne Miller and his orchestra will furnish the music and the refreshment committee will have some excellent refreshments ready for you.

Orland Park Post now has 62 members, three more than last year and this makes the 7th consecutive year that it has been cited for sustained membership. At the recent meeting of the 8th District, Homewood, the Orland Park Post was one of the posts to be awarded "Wings" for attaining the 100 per cent membership mark in the National Commanders membership drive.

Robert E. Cooper has been promoted to Staff Sergeant and has been transferred from Fort Lewis to Battery A, 45 7th A. A. A., Automatic weapons Battalion at Camp Hulon, Texas.

A surprise pre-nuptial shower was tendered Miss Marion Wheeler last Tuesday evening by her fellow employees of the Telephone Exchange at Palos Park where she is Junior Supervisor. The affair was held in the rest room of the Exchange and the tables, set with crystal dishes and decorated with lilies of the valley and surrounded by a huge cake was already prepared when Miss Wheeler arrived at 10 p. m., to take up her usual duties. A decorated umbrella, from which colored streamers radiated to the place of each guest at which appropriate favors were placed, was suspended over the luncheon table. Miss Wheeler was presented with a corsage of lilies of the valley and pink roses and also with a complete set of dishes from her fellow workers.

Miss Wheeler will become the bride of Wilbur G. Lang of Orland Township Saturday, June 12.

Mrs. S. S. Knox left for Babson Park, Florida Monday night to visit the parents of Mr. Knox, who are both quite ill. In the absence of Mrs. Knox, the duties of Orland Park correspondent for the Orland Park Herald will be faithfully carried out by Dr. S. S. Knox. Send or give all Orland news to him.

At the meeting of the W. S. C. S. of the Methodist church held on Thursday, May 27th, Mrs. Harold Morlock was elected President and Mrs. Elmer Newton, Vice-President.

An interesting letter has been received by Mrs. S. S. Knox from Don Janes who is in army service some where in Africa. He writes that in the ship on which he went across, he saw Ted Uthe's name carved on the bunk in which he slept. A similar co-incidence occurred at Camp Wolters, Texas, where Sherman Knox, Jr., was issued a field pack on which was printed the name of Bob Dunlap of Palos Park. Our boys sure do get around, don't they?

Buddy Cox has been transferred to Bat. B., 560th A. A. A. W. Battalion, Mbl, Camp Stewart, Ga. Gene Uthe is now located with Co., 642, U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Wm. Schmidt, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. James McLaughrey, visited his son Earl last week at the Naval Camp at Glenview, Ill., where Earl is with the camp guard unit.

GOOD NIGHT

AXIS!

It's June DAIRY MONTH in America. 130 million people are paying honor to the 5 million dairy farmers of the nation, who are breaking all records in milk production to beat the Axis.

We know you are short handed, Mr. Farmer, and can't get the equipment you need to do the job right; but just the same, you are serving Uncle Sam with 100 per cent Americanism. Congratulations and a salute for your contribution to Victory.

You Can't Keep a Good Ship Down

Navy authorities revealed that 14 of the 19 ships named as lost or damaged at Pearl Harbor have been returned to active duty. At left, the smashed sections of the main deck of the battleship Oklahoma are covered with mud and barnacles after 17 months immersion. Righting her was one of the most spectacular jobs of salvage done in the harbor. The battleship had capsized at an angle of 151½ degrees—leaving her practically upside down. Upper right: A side of the hull of the capsized mine ship Ogala is shown before she was salvaged. Lower right: Two barnacled guns of the Arizona are shown after removal from the ship.

Japanese Relocation Center in California

Army Engineers Rescue Flood Victims

When the White river in Arkansas broke its banks and flooded the adjacent country, United States army engineers came to the rescue. This photo shows an amphibious jeep driving up to a front porch to rescue a family of flooded out residents. The top of a partially submerged automobile may be seen over the edge of the jeep.

Before It Met the Allies

A Nazi Mark VI tank is shown plowing through a house in this photo from a German propaganda magazine. This is one of the very few good pictures of this tank to reach America. Most of the other pictures show the tank after it has tangled with Allied equipment, been knocked out of action, damaged, and captured. Note here that its long high velocity gun is turned back over its tail to avoid injury.

Still Working at 95

At 95, Marcus Turner, a Negro, works for an Allied victory at the Post Engineers section in Miami Beach, Fla.

Attu Commander

Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Landrum, pictured in his working clothes, was named commander of all U. S. army troops on the island of Attu by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

They Came, They Saw, They Conquered

Scores of American soldiers carrying their equipment pour out of landing barges onto the black volcanic sand of Massacre Bay, on the Aleutian island of Attu which had been held by the Japanese. Fighting in conjunction with army air forces these men forced the enemy to retreat to the sea.

Even Mules Fight Axis

Despite mechanization, the army needs the lowly mule. These three have been picked from a mule market in St. Louis, Mo., to be transported to a branch of the armed service. The demands of military forces have caused prices on mules to soar and there is a brisk rush of trading each day for this cross between a jackass and a mare.

On the Road to Tokyo

British engineers in Burma are hacking highways through jungles, mountains, to create a system of roads and supply lines over which they plan to force the Japanese from their positions in that sector. At top: British troops are working on a new stretch of road. Below: A convoy of jeeps carry supplies around a loop on a new road in Burma.

British Strategists at Allied War Talks

Three of Britain's war leaders take their places across the table from the United States war chiefs at a meeting of American and British war strategists in Washington, D. C. Left to right: Lieut. Gen. Sir Hastings L. Ismay, chief staff officer to the minister of defense; Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, first sea lord and chief of naval staff; and Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial staff.

'Oh Suzanna'

On a banjo made from the metal of a wrecked Japanese Zero fighter plane, Lieut. Walter E. Moore strums out American favorites at a U. S. base in Buna, New Guinea. Tuning screws are 25 caliber cartridges.

Adrift 131 Days

Fish and rainwater was the complete diet of Poon Lim, this 25-year-old Chinese sailor, while he drifted on the Atlantic for 131 days with only a raft between him and Davy Jones' locker. His ship had been torpedoed.

Jaws of Death

"Excessive speed" was named as the cause of a wreck of a Pennsylvania train, New York bound from Atlantic City, killing 14 persons and injuring 89 others at Delair, N. J. The wrecked vestibule looks like a grim jaw ready to devour the inspecting officials.

Here's Mud in His Eye

This front cover of a Nazi propaganda magazine which devoted an entire issue to the mud and water in Russia shows a German trooper taking a drink of muddy water.

But the man in question clutched his hat firmly with both hands and shook his head.

"I will not," he retorted indignantly, "not until you return the lawnmower you borrowed last summer."

Stages of Salmon

During the course of its life, the Atlantic salmon passes through eight stages, each of which has its own name: Sac fry, advanced fry, fingerling, parr, smolt, grilse, adult salmon and kelt, the last during the time after spawning.

WAVES Acquire New Rating "U" for Utility

A new specialist rating with the classification U (for utility) has been added to the many ratings available in the Waves, the United States Navy Women's reserve, according to James F. Watson, recruiter in charge of the Navy's recruiting substation at Aurora.

The new rating is assigned to the WAVES enlisted personnel for supervisory duties in connection with housekeeping functions and the serving of food in WAVES living quarters and messes.

Young women who show a preference and aptitude for housekeeping and general stewardess duties will have an opportunity to become petty officers in this new classification. Young women 20 to 36 who have two years of high school or two years of business school are eligible, not only for this new utility work, but for the many other jobs in the Navy that are now being taken over by WAVES, thereby releasing men for duty with their shipmates in the fleet.

Complete information can be secured by calling in person or writing to the Navy Recruiting Station, Post Office Bldg., Aurora, Ill., or contacting the traveling recruiter in this territory.

Traveling Recruiter's Schedule
